Prioritize a full launch in Hanoi, allocating the larger budget band (250,000–400,000 USD) to capture the high-fit, high-whitespace opportunity, while using smaller pilot investments in Ho Chi Minh City (75,000–150,000 USD) and Da Nang to validate concepts and refine the offering before scaling further.

Da Nang	GO	73	high	0.66	0.82	0.78	50–80% ($250,000–$400,000)

Hanoi
The GO verdict is reinforced by a taste-fit score of 74, strong audience fit (0.661) and ample whitespace (0.7), indicating a sizable opportunity, yet the analog mean popularity of 0.828 shows many well-established competitors and the FNB match count of 34 suggests a thinner venue pool. Overall, Hanoi appears ready for a full rollout but will require differentiation from existing coffee leaders.

Top risks: Strong incumbent competitors (analogMeanPopularity 0.828) · Modest venue data (FNBMatches 34) · AudienceFit only moderate (0.661)

Ho Chi Minh City
The pilot verdict is supported by a high demand proof of 0.96 and a perfect cell affinity of 1 in Ward 3, suggesting strong immediate interest, but the saturated share of 0.68 and modest whitespace of 0.32 warn of limited growth room. Balancing these, the brand should treat Ho Chi Minh as a test market to validate concepts before scaling.

Top risks: High market saturation (saturatedShare 0.68) · Limited whitespace (0.32) · AudienceFit below optimal (0.639)

Neighborhood: Ward 3 · Pop-up / shop-in-shop

Da Nang
Da Nang's GO verdict is backed by a solid taste-fit score of 73, high whitespace (0.78) and a perfect cell affinity in Hòa Phú, suggesting untapped demand, while the low analog mean popularity (0.632) and limited FNB matches (24) indicate a less crowded competitive landscape but also less proven venue data. This mix makes Dan Ang a promising expansion target with room to shape the specialty coffee scene.

Top risks: Low analog popularity (0.632) indicating weak brand presence · Few comparable venues (FNBMatches 24) · AudienceFit only moderate (0.66)
